LIONEL BARBER

US Managing Editor, the Financial Times

Lionel Barber is the Financial Times' US Managing Editor, based in New York. In this role, he holds primary editorial responsibility for the FT's US Edition, and is also responsible for all US news on FT.com.

Prior to becoming US Managing Editor, he was Editor of the FT's Continental European Edition (2000-2002). His other positions at the FT include News Editor (1998-2000), Brussels Bureau Chief (1992-1998), and both Washington correspondent and US Editor (1986-1992).

In 2001, Barber was invited to brief George W. Bush on European affairs prior to the president's inaugural mission to Europe. Also that year, Barber was voted one of the 50 most influential personalities in Europe by European Voice.

Barber began his career in journalism in 1978, when he was hired as a reporter for The Scotsman. In 1981, he moved to The Sunday Times, where he was a business correspondent.

Barber has extensive television and radio experience in both the US and Europe. In the US, he has appeared on ABC, CBS and CNN. In Europe, he has appeared on Danish, Dutch, Finnish and French television.

He graduated from Oxford University with a joint honors degree in German and modern history. He speaks fluent French and German.

He has written several books and has lectured widely on US foreign policy, transatlantic relations, European security and monetary union in the US and Europe. He lives in Manhattan with his wife and two children.
