REPORTER OF THE WEEK -Tuesday, March 4, 2003

This was our annual Police Recognition Day, sponsored by ADT Security Service. It was characterized by significant representation from the New York City Police Department and an extended dais occupied by prominent members of the Club and Police Department.

President Silvio Amori opened the meeting and introduced Officer Carl Dixon, who sang the "Star-Spangled Banner," solo, accompanied by Bernie Wytko at the piano. Lillian Coury offered the day's invocation.

Dr. Jeffrey Burkes introduced the day's speaker, Chief of the New York City Police Department, Joseph J. Esposito, who, before beginning his speech on safety, thanked the Club for the over 1.5 million dollars it had raised and distributed in response to the 9/11 terrorist attacks. He pointed out that last year there was a 5% decrease in the seven major crime areas and a 70% decrease over the last ten years, due primarily to officers on the street. In response to 9/11 Commissioner Kelly has introduced anti-terrorist measures including: a worldwide focus and intelligence effort on terrorists and how their activities might affect New York, education of police officers in biochemical attacks, public announcement systems, a terrorism hotline, and activities such as the Apple Group, terrorism training, and community efforts.

Police Officer Judith Hernandez was awarded the Medal of Honor for the extraordinary life saving courage she demonstrated after the attack of 9/11.

Giorgio Balestrieri introduced four guests from three countries and a large number of guests and visitors from the United States.

Among those acknowledged at today's meeting were Roberta Galluccio-Richardson and Dorothy Kolev, who served as greeters.

Accompanied by their sponsors, three new members were inducted: Nick Uresin, John German, and Mitchell Nichtberger.

Members of the Police Department on the dais fielded questions from the floor.
